It would be of interest to many in Shanghai dabbling in stocks and shares to learn that on the complaint of some speculators and investors in Bombay an inquiry was instituted some time ago under the chairmanship of Sir Wilfrid Atlay into the working of the Bombay Stock Exchange. The report of this inquiry committee just published makes interesting reading, for the recommendations made therein are many, some of which could be put into effect in Shanghai as well.

This committee lays great stress on the necessity of prohibiting, by legislative enactments, all forward dealings in stocks and shares by members of the Stock Brokers' Association. If these members reject the opportunity now afforded them of introducing the necessary change in the policy and practice of the Association regarding "corners," this is considered a grave defect in the present policy of this institution. It is felt that the Bombay market could attain that position among the great security markets of the world which is warranted by the wealth, enterprise and undoubted ability of the people.

REGULATION NEEDED?

Whether a case exists in Shanghai for the necessity, propriety or utility of legislation for regulating business on the Shanghai Stock Exchange will be a moot point for discussion. Some years ago the Hongkong Government stepped in and introduced the Keewick Ordinance, which made forward dealings in shares without a declaration on the contract of the registered numbers of the shares illegal. When the Stamp Duties Act was brought up in the Hongkong Legislative Council some three years ago the Keewick Ordinance was amended and the restriction regarding the declaration of the registered numbers of shares on forward contracts was removed, thus making forward gambling on the Stock Exchange in that Colony unrestricted.

The recommendations of the committee of inquiry into the working of the Bombay Stock Exchange are some twenty in number. Among these we note a suggestion that the "secretary should be a paid official, not being a member of the Association." In Shanghai and Hongkong the practice is to recruit the secretary from among the members, the position being honorary. Apparently, the Hongkong and Shanghai Stock Exchanges are an advance on the Bombay Exchange, for we notice the recommendations set out that "the board to be called the managing committee should retire annually," "the use and stamping of a uniform form of contract note should be enforced" and "a daily official list should be published."

The committee also suggest that the disciplinary rules should be strengthened and put rigidly into force. In Hongkong and Shanghai the rules governing membership to the two bodies are, many times rigidly enforced. It will be recalled that about a year ago the Shanghai Stock Exchange suspended and eventually struck off the membership rolls one of its members who failed to meet his commitments. The Committee of the Shanghai Stock Exchange cannot be too strict on this point, for on its fairness of attitude towards the speculating and investing public a great deal of the popularity of the Exchange will rest. The complaints of the public against Stock Exchange members are investigated at present on lines of the London Stock Exchange.

Other interesting points in the recommendations are that rules,

Senator Wheeler, Oil Prosecutor, Also Charged

(BY UNITED PRESS)

Washington, April 9.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democratic Senator from Montana, and one of the most relentless of the oil probes, was himself accused of accepting fees, after he became Senator, for using his influence to obtain oil land leases for certain individuals, before the Senate Committee on Public Lands, which is investigating the Teapot Dome scandal, at today's sessions.

Special counsel named by President Coolidge to prosecute in the oil frauds are expected to bring charges against Senator Wheeler as soon as the Senate adjourns for the summer.

Republican leaders, who have borne the brunt of the oil investigation to date, are jubilant over the latest turn in the scandal.

Senator Wheeler, who has practiced law in Butte, Montana since 1906, was Deputy U. S. Attorney for Montana under appointment by President Wilson until his election to the Senate. His colleague in the Senate is Senator Thomas J. Walsh, also a Democrat, and the Democrats most vigilant prosecutor in the oil scandal.

JUDGE PURDY TO HEAR FIRST CASES FRIDAY MORNING

Seven Criminal Actions On Docket—Husar To Leave

Judge Milton D. Purdy announced yesterday that after conference with U. S. District Attorney Leonard G. Husar, U. S. Marshal Thelton R. Porter, and Clerk of the Court William Chapman he had decided to convene court on Friday morning at 10 o'clock and dispose of the criminal cases now on the calendar.

One of the main reasons why immediate action is to be given criminal cases awaiting trial is the fact that District Attorney Leonard G. Husar is sailing for four months leave in the United States on the President Jefferson on April 25, and desires to get all criminal matters out of the way before he departs. During his absence in America an Acting District Attorney will be named so that all criminal cases which may arise in the future will be taken care of at once.

The most important criminal case before Judge Purdy involves two charges of obtaining money under false pretenses against Alfred P. Pattison, who was arrested three months ago on a consular warrant from Tientsin charging him with having secured $10,000 from his Chinese comrade there, was held for trial after a preliminary hearing before the Tientsin Consular Court. He served an extended period in jail awaiting trial, and is now at liberty on his own recognisance.

OTHER CASES

In six other cases to come before Judge Purdy on Friday the men charged are all in the American jail, unable to raise bail. Three are charged with carrying concealed weapons, Hugh McCauley and James E. Fleen with having revolvers in their possession, and H. D. Roberts with having four Mauser pistols and 20 rounds of ammunition.

Two men are charged with stealing overcoats in days that were colder than the pleasant Spring examples we are now having. A Filipino, Pedro Antonio, is charged with stealing an overcoat owned by Mr. S. Modesto Kyko, the well known Filipino trial-horse of the prize-ring, and William B. McCabe is charged with stealing a coat owned by Charles Thompson.

One man, Charles L. Bennett, is charged with vagrancy.

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 8.—Lloyd's returns show that a tonnage of 1,473,000 tons was under construction in the United Kingdom during the past quarter, an increase of 78,000 tons as compared with the previous quarter and a decrease of 19,000 tons as compared with a twelvemonth ago. The total includes 101,000 tons on which work has been suspended.

The tonnage launched in the past quarter was 361,000 tons, as compared with 114,000 tons for the previous quarter.

The total tonnage under construction abroad was 1,042,000 tons, including 118,000 tons on which work has been suspended, Germany and Denmark heading the list with 295,000 tons.

The total tonnage launched abroad was 188,000 tons.

WALLACE GIVEN NINE MONTHS BY MIXED COURT

Now Faces Further Charges
In The French
Concession

W. Wallace, 27 years old, described as a Russian, but himself claiming American citizenship, was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment and subsequent expulsion from the Settlement by the Mixed Court yesterday following his conviction on one of four charges of securing money and goods by means of false pretenses.

Wallace was originally charged with securing a ceiling fan and desk valued at $125 from a Chinese firm at 5 Poochow Road last July; with obtaining $12,500 from a Chinese named Sung Meung-sen; $500 from one Pa Young-kaung and 250 cases of brandy from Messrs. Arbuthnot and Co., 24 Whangpoo Road. Wallace claimed that he was merely acting as foreign manager for a Chinese firm in these transactions and could not be held responsible. Cross-examined yesterday, he said that he was an American citizen and declared that there were other foreigners in the firm for which he was working when the fraud was alleged to have taken place. These foreigners, he said were men by the names of Bacon, Howell and Schiller. The company, he said, was solely responsible for the deals put through and in the case of the second charge—where he was charged with obtaining $12,500 from Sung Meung-sen—the son of the complainant was a director of the company, and his father must have been well aware of the financial standing of the firm.

The Court dismissed the first charge—regarding the fan and desk purchase—and stated that there was doubt in its mind as regarded the second and third charge, but that a conviction would be given on the charge of obtaining the brandy. Accused would be sentenced to nine months' imprisonment from date of arrest—February 22—and expulsion, but meantime would be turned over to the French police for trial in the French court. Wallace faces one criminal and three civil suits in Frenchtown.

The case was prosecuted by Superintendent Vaughan while Dr. O. Fischer appeared for the defendant. At the conclusion the Court expressed its thanks to both for the able way in which both prosecution and defense had been handled—Dr. Fischer having acted without fees—and for the assistance given the Bench by counsel.

NEW REGULATION TO HELP TRAFFIC COPS. GET "DOPE"

More Trial And Tribulations
For Motorists

If you see a fellow driver stepping on the gas, flying across the road against traffic signals, or any of the other thousand and one things against Shanghai's traffic regulations after April 14, you'll have to tell on him (or her) if you are questioned by the police.

The new traffic regulation, which organizes such a traffic officer reserve force, and which appears in today's Municipal Gazette, reads as follows:

No. 34a.—"It shall be the duty of the licensee of any motor vehicle, if required, immediately to give any information which might lead to the identification of the driver of such motor vehicle who has committed, or is alleged to have committed, a breach of the Traffic Regulations, or any other offense."

NINE CHARGED AS ARMED ROBBERS IN SHOOTING CASE

Six New Suspects Brought Before Mixed
Court

Nine Chinese appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday in connection with the armed robbery at Oho Dah Koh village last Saturday night and the subsequent killing of two Chinese and wounding of foreign Police Constable Bennett and of a third Chinese. These included the three men arrested shortly after the affray.

When the six new suspects were charged Detective Sergeant Andrews stated that on information received to the effect that "men connected with the robbery were congregated in a tea-shed on Robinson Road he went to the address and arrested three men. The principal accused, arrested at that time, implicated two others—now the second and third accused—and these were arrested later, arrest of the sixth following. The men had made statements at the time but now denied them. He asked a demand for further inquiry.

Chief Detective Inspector Cruickshank stated that he and Sergeant Andrews believed that three of the men were not actually concerned in the robbery, but he asked that they be detained pending further police investigation.

The Court accordingly remanded the case two weeks. The case of the three men arrested following the shooting was remanded for a like period and all will appear together at the end of that time.

Lieut. Lawton Leaves Today For Amoy To Plot Way For Round-The-World Flyers

Advance Manager For Epoch-Making Flight Leaves
Captain In Charge—American Legion To Undertake Entertainment Of Aerial Visitors

Lieut. M. S. Lawton, who has been in Shanghai for the past week making arrangements for the American round-the-world flyers, who are now at Prince Rupert, British Columbia, sails today for Amoy to plot the next leg of the airmen's flight after leaving Shanghai, and to make all arrangements necessary at Amoy.

JEREMIAH SMITH IS NAMED FOR HUNGARY POST

Will Be Commissioner-General
For Financial Reconstruction

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, April 8.—The League of Nations has appointed the Bostonian financial expert, Mr. J. M. Smith, Commissioner-General for the Financial Reconstruction of Hungary. Mr. Smith took part in the organization of the Chinese Consortium.

Several prominent American financiers have been mentioned as probable appointees as Commissioner General for the Financial Reconstruction of Hungary under the League of Nations, and one, Mr. William P. G. Harding, former Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank in Washington, was offered the appointment, but declined.

Because of the fact that there are numerous "J. Smiths" in the world definite information concerning Mr. Smith's financial record is lacking, but it is presumed to be Mr. Jeremiah Smith, Jr., well known lawyer and financial advisor of Boston.

Mr. Jeremiah Smith, Jr., son of the famous Massachusetts judge of the same name, is a close personal friend of Mr. Thomas W. Lamont of the House of Morgan, and has understood Mr. Lamont in many of his big financial undertakings. He has practiced in Boston as a member of the well known law firm of Herrick, Smith, Donald and Farley since 1896, served with the American Army as a Captain in the Quartermaster Corps, served with the American Mission to Negotiate Peace as counsel to the U. S. Treasury Department, and as an advisor on financial questions, and is a member of the War Relief Commission of the Rockefeller Foundation. He is a Democrat in politics, unmarried, and lives in Cambridge under the shadow of the Harvard school of thought in finance.

Saloon, and other stops between Shanghai and Calcutta.

Lieut. Lawton, during the week he has spent here, chose a stretch of country between the Standard Oil and Vacuum Oil company's properties on the Pootung side, about four miles down the river, for the aviators to land here, and upon his departure he is leaving details of arranging buoys and other things still to be done in the hands of Captain W. I. Eisler, Shanghai representative of the U. S. Shipping Board.

The planes will land in the water, as they are outfitted with pontoons, and Captain Eisler will also be in charge of the arrangements for landing upon the actual arrival of the flyers.

ENTERTAINMENT

The War Department has officially requested that the flyers be entertained as little as possible by well-wishers at the various points of call they will make, because of the fact that the flyers and the mechanics will be greatly fatigued and need rest more than anything else when they land. While in Shanghai Lieut. Lawton was the guest at a dinner of Mr. Gardner Crane, Commander of the Frederick Ward post of the American Legion, and made arrangements so that the local post of the Legion, acting with Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham, will be in charge of any entertainment for the flyers that occurs here.

While definite arrangements are very difficult to make because it is not known exactly when the flyers will arrive or how long they will be here Commander Crane announced that in all probability the flyers when they arrive to which the members of committees of the various American organizations in Shanghai would be invited. Major Frederick L. Martin, who is in charge of the actual flight, will speak briefly at the dinner, it is said.

Before leaving Lieut. Lawton explained that the world flight now in progress—although Major Martin has been temporarily delayed at Prince Rupert with two broken struts—had as its purpose the advancement of the science of flying and was not a spectacular dash around the globe.

FLIGHT'S PURPOSE

"The Air Service began preparations for the flight many months ago," Lieut. Lawton said, "although it was announced only a short time before the men actually hopped off. During the time arrangements were being made."

COMMITTEES OF EXPERTS ON REPARATIONS MAKE REPORT PUBLIC TOMORROW

Germany To Pay 16,000,000,000 Gold Marks
Immediately And Make Annual Payments Up To Two Billion—Railways Handed Over To International Company—Committee Of Economic Restoration

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, April 9.—The report of the two Committees of Experts on reparations will be published tomorrow. It is a huge document of 60 pages. According to a forecast, it proposes that Germany should immediately pay 16,000,000,000 gold marks and also make annual payments between a minimum of 1,400,000,000 gold marks and a maximum of 2,000,000,000 gold marks. Alternatively, she should pay 1,000,000,000 gold marks in the first year, 1,200,000,000 gold marks in the second and third years, 1,750,000,000 gold marks in the fourth and 2,400,000,000 gold marks in the fifth year and onwards. After the sixth year the Reparations Commission would demand supplementary payments, calculated on the basis of Germany's prosperity, possibly amounting to several hundred million gold marks.

CHURCH DELEGATE TELLS JAPANESE OF U.S. FRIENDSHIP

Judge Lobingier Also Attends
Notable Meeting
In Tokio

(Exclusive China Press)

Tokio, April 9.—"Selfish politicians, yellow newspapers and the labor unions are responsible for the anti-Japanese agitation in the United States at the present time," Mr. Corwin Shank, who came to Japan representing the Federated Council of Churches in Christ, told the Japan Society in an address delivered tonight.

Mr. Shank recounted interviews he had with Secretary of States Charles Evans Hughes before he left Washington for Japan, and asserted that he represented not only the opinion of the 3,000,000 Christians affiliated to his organization, but the bulk of the population of the United States.

Mr. Shank also promised that the present situation growing out of the inclusion of an anti-Japanese immigration clause in the new Immigration bill before Congress "would be made right," in replying to a statement by Mr. T. Miyako, the toastmaster, that the immigration legislation now before the American Congress had caused a critical point to arise in Japan's relations with the United States.

Japanese residents in the Pacific Coast states receive the same consideration given to the representatives of all other nations, Mr. Shank declared.

Judge Charles S. Lobingier, retiring as Judge of the United States Court for China, who is passing through en route to the United States, and who was a guest of the Society, made a short talk endorsing Mr. Shank's views, and Mr. James Franklin, vice-president of the Federated Council, also spoke briefly declaring that race prejudice was dying out in America.

In replying to Mr. Shank the toastmaster said that all Japanese were gratified by the good will expressed by the American churches and urged him to convey to all Americans their appreciation of American interest.

The Washington despatches on the immigration question before Congress and Mr. Shank's address were given great prominence in the Japanese newspapers.

Serious State Of Affairs In Honduras City

(Reuter's American Service)

Washington, April 8.—Advice received by the State Department depict a serious state of affairs in the capital of Honduras. The ground on the outskirts of the city is strewn with dead. Typhoid and dysentery are raging. No attempt is being made to inter or cremate the dead. The city is still besieged and there has been considerable hand-to-hand fighting.

McKenna Committee Reports On German Capital Abroad

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, April 9.—The report of the expert committee enquiring into the flight of German capital, under the presidency of Mr. Reginald McKenna, estimates that the value of German capital abroad at the end of last year was between 5,700,000,000 and 7,800,000,000 gold marks, making with 500,000,000 gold marks worth of foreign money held in Germany a grand total of 3,000,000,000 gold marks.

It states that the principal method of acquiring foreign capital was by negotiating in paper marks abroad, and declares that enquiries at the principal German banks, assisted by chartered accountants, show that the Germans thus made a net profit of 7,000,000,000 to 8,000,000,000 gold marks. The report enumerates other methods adopted for the export of capital, like the sale of merchandise, securities, bullion and bills of exchange.

In order to stop the flight of capital, the report recommends abolition of the cause, namely, desist cessation of inflation. It attributes the flight of capital principally to the failure to balance the Budget, causing capitalists to translate their money into foreign denominations to avoid loss through depreciation of their own currency, and declares that the flight was accentuated by the attitude of the German people towards the payments which Germany was called upon to make to her creditors.

The committee refers to the recommendations of the Dawes committee for establishing German money on a stable foundation, thus facilitating the return of a large amount of German wealth abroad to ordinary commercial channels. It proposes for the period of transition that persons liable to penalties under the existing law should be pardoned and that advantages should be offered to Germans to subscribe to loans in foreign currency.

(Reuter's Service)
London, April 8.—The House of Commons opened daily. The benches were sparsely occupied. There was no sign of yesterday's dramatic events until, replying to Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald stated that the Government Eviction Bill could not be re-introduced during this session, but the Government thought it was possible satisfactorily to amend the Bill of Mr. E. D. Simon, Liberal Member for Withington, which passed its second reading last night, the passage of which the Government would facilitate after it had been satisfactorily amended. The Government had not abandoned the proposal to make assistance to the unemployed a public charge, but "public funds" would be local funds.

Mr. E. D. Simon's Bill is almost identical with the Government's Eviction Bill, except the clause on which the Government was defeated.

London April 8.—In the House of Commons today at question time, Mr. Sidney Webb, the President of the Board of Trade, stated that the Government had decided not to introduce legislation extending the duration of the provisions of Part Two of the Safeguarding of Industries Act, which provides for duties to meet the cost of depreciated currencies, and these accordingly, would lapse on August 10 (Liberal and Labor cheers). The Government had carefully considered the report of the committee recommending a duty of 33 1/3 percent on iron, embroidery and silk, but he did not propose to seek Parliament to impose the duties (Ministerial cheers).

Lieut. Lawton Leaves Today For Amoy

made the flyers were picked out after a very careful survey of the flying officers in the service, men of exceptional stamina being sought because however good a flyer may be he will also have to be almost a superman to survive the extremely rigorous work cut out for him in piloting his machine around the world.

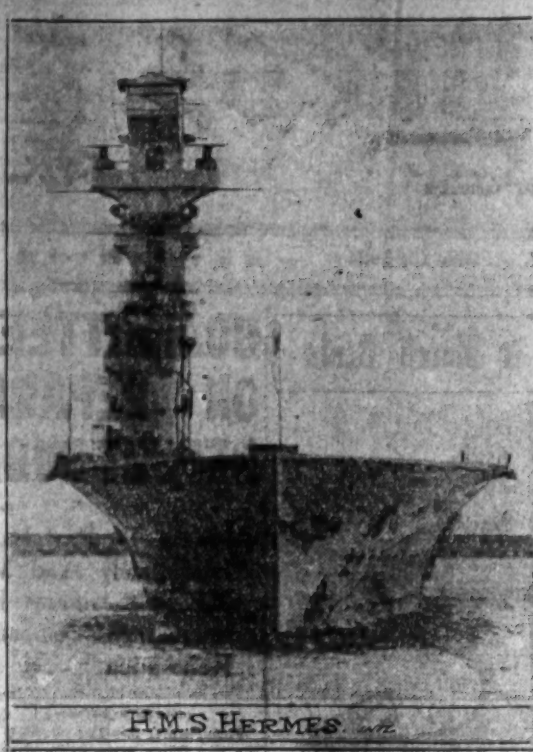

Lieut. Lawton then pointed out the historical epoch making point connected with the flight, rivalled only by Magellan in his first circumnavigation of the globe, a sailing ship feat that released the peoples of the earth from the limitations of superstitions fear and ignorance which had bound them for thousands of years.

A NEW EPOCH
The United States, the birthplace of aviation in the present light, propose to participate in ushering in a new epoch by being the first nation to fly completely around the world. By the flight the United States Air Service hopes to point the way for all nations to develop commercial aviation and to secure for the United States the honor of being the first nation to encircle the world by air. At the same time it will focus the eyes of Americans themselves on the American Air Service and be in itself propaganda to induce all Americans to take an interest in building up aviation in the United States.

The itinerary measures between 25,000 and 26,000 miles. From Los Angeles the flyers flew to Seattle, Washington, the northern most point in the United States at which they touch, without incident. After hopping off at Seattle they reached Prince Rupert, British Columbia, 450 miles distance but the flight was temporarily delayed there because of the accident to Major Martin's plane in landing. The British attempt to circumnavigate the globe was also halted at Cowi, one of their early stops, because of an accident. Both flights will be continued, however, within a few hours. While the American flyers are attempting to encircle the globe in the shortest possible time no haste will be made which will prejudice ultimate success. The flight must be made within six months from April 1, however, he-

LADY MACLEAY'S MOTHER DIES AT FLORENCE

Lady Emily Peel Passes
Away After Long Illness

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, April 6.—The death is announced at Florence, on April 4, of Lady Macleay's mother, Lady Emily Peel, after a long illness.

The deceased lady was the widow of the late Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Bart., G. C. B., and the daughter of the ninth Marquess of Tweeddale and of his wife Lady Susan Montagu, daughter of the Duke of Manchester.

Lady Emily Peel was the youngest of a family of seventeen children, and among her sisters were the Marchioness of Dalhousie, wife of the Viceroy of India, and the Duchess of Wellington, who married the only son of the late Duke. Among her brothers the youngest, Admiral of the Fleet Lord John Hay, commanded the British naval forces in the China seas in the sixties.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS
In an endeavor to produce an even better paper than was formerly the case—an endeavor which the steadily growing popularity of THE CHINA PRESS has proved to be successful—the publishers have recently increased the editorial staff, supplemented the cubic and foreign correspondence services, added a pictorial news section, and improved the editorial and feature contents. These improvements naturally entail a much heavier cost of production, and thus we are reluctantly compelled to increase our rates of subscription, as from April 1st, as follows:
One Year Max. $25.00
Six Months 15.00
Four Months 10.50
One Month 3.75
Postage to outports, etc.
$6.00 per annum extra.
Under the new rates subscribers will still obtain THE CHINA PRESS more cheaply than it can be purchased day by day on the street. Allowing $12 publishing days to the year (excluding 12 holidays), the annual cost, if purchased on the street, is $36.40.

PRINCE'S TRIP TO CAPETOWN WILL BE MADE

Merely Postponed Until After Elections In June

(Reuter's Service)
Capetown, April 8.—In the House of Assembly today the Nationalist leader, Mr. Maritz, said that he hoped that the announcement of the postponement of the Prince of Wales' visit was not equivalent to saying that the Prince would not come at all (cheers). He hoped that the Prince would not come at all sections when he said that, if the Prince visited South Africa in future, he would be greeted with respect and warmth worthy of his high position and the South African people (cheers).
The Premier, General Smuts, replying said that the Prince was assured of a most royal welcome by every shade of opinion. It was only the proprieties of the case that induced the Government to advise him to postpone his trip during the turmoil of the election. General Smuts hoped that the invitation would be renewed when the elections were over.

Chinese Students Enjoy Visit; More Going

(Eastern News Agency)
Tokio, April 9.—The Chinese students, who have been on a visit to Japan with the object of inspecting educational conditions in this country, have, since their arrival here on March 25, been cordially received and entertained by various public bodies here and have exchanged views without reserve with the Japanese authorities concerned on educational matters of the two countries.
After paying a visit to Nikko, they left on the 6th instant for the Kansai districts where they inspected detached palaces, schools, factories and sights in Kyoto, Osaka and Nara. It is expected that they will start from Osaka for Peking on the 16th instant by way of Korea and Manchuria. The Bureau of Japan's Cultural Enterprises via-vis China, it is reported, contemplates inviting to Japan now and then more Chinese students from various parts of China in future.

Eight Foreigners And 175 Chinese Died Last Week

Eight foreigners and 175 Chinese died of all causes in the International Settlement last week, according to the weekly report of Acting Commissioner of Public Health, Athelstan Hill. Communicable diseases reported during the same period included one foreigner with smallpox, one foreigner and 4 Chinese with typhoid fever, one foreigner and one Chinese with scarlet fever, one foreigner and 19 Chinese with tuberculosis, 3 Chinese with dysentery and 8 Chinese with measles.

Government Party Has Lead In Italy

(Reuter's Service)
Rome, April 8.—The new Chamber of Deputies consists of 275 Members of the Government Party against 160 Members, representing the eleven other parties. The Catholic Popular Party now have 40 seats, having lost 66. The Democratic Socialists now have 25 seats, having lost 57.

both in English and vernacular, should be available to the public, the arbitration committee should be abolished and replaced by two members nominated from a panel of arbitrators, partnership rules should be rigidly enforced, sub-brokers should be totally abolished, and rules relating to "corners" as set out in the official representation of the Association should be repealed. Perhaps some of these might with advantage be embodied in the working of the Shanghai Stock Exchange.

Order Inspection Of Shantung Ry. By New Staff

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, April 6.—The first annual inspection of the Shantung Railway since its restoration by Japan had just been ordered by the Ministry of Communications. Mr. Chuan Liang, with two foreign experts and a staff of assistants left Peking for a special train yesterday afternoon and were due at Tientsin today. It is stated that all details of equipment and administration will be examined.

Great Pianist Here

Munz Delights Shanghai Music Lovers; To Play Again

In artistic status towering above the new important musicians arriving from Europe in recent years is Mieczyslaw Munz, the young and sensational Polish pianist. Munz made his New York debut in recital on October 20, 1922, when he immediately won the highest recognition in the unanimous praise of both the critics and public. To what superlative degree may best be gathered at a glance from what the dean of the New York music editors, H. E. Krehbiel, said of his playing in a paragraph from the "New York Tribune": "Piano-forte playing of a higher order than that disclosed at Aeolian Hall last night will probably be heard at some, but not many, recitals and concerts this season. It will come from not more than half a dozen men who have long ago been acclaimed as master musicians as well as virtuosi."
His second New York recital strengthened his position in the musical life of the metropolis, and stamped him as an outstanding stellar attraction in the pianistic world.
Although Munz played in concerts in Krakow at the age of 10, his formal debut was made in Berlin in 1920, when he appeared as soloist with the Berlin Symphony Orchestra, on which occasion his program was three piano concertos—List's A major, Brahms' D minor and Frank's Variations Symphoniques. Following this performance, he played five times in Vienna, twice with orchestra and three recitals; two recitals in Rome; and then toured Poland and Hungary. In Vienna he played at one of the subscription concerts of the Symphony Orchestra, under Tull.
In his recital at the Town Hall Wednesday evening Mr. Munz more than made good on all the fine things that American and European critics said about him, for his mastery over the piano was indeed a delightful revelation to Shanghai music lovers.
Mr. Munz will give another recital Saturday evening.

World Progress Of The Churches

It is often maintained that the Labor Party in England owes its sudden rise to a considerable extent, to the religious idealism which characterizes many of its leaders, and which has drawn into its ranks an unprecedented number of the youth of England. A London daily prints an appeal from a clergyman for a similar idealism in all parties, which declares that "there is a widespread feeling among the younger members of the Unionist Party that its leaders must get back to first principles if that party is really to win the allegiance of youth. Never in recent years have high ideals had a bigger opportunity than they have today. Whoever political leader convinces this Nation that his program is broadbased on Christian principles will not only command a big majority, but will attract to his standard the choiceless millions who in obscurity and loneliness are waiting for the dawn."

additional support is being sent to the Rev. Josef Ferencz, for nearly 60 years bishop of the Unitarian churches in Transylvania.

A national, Protestant, nonsectarian broadcasting station, providing religious, educational and ethical radio programs has been proposed by the Board of Episcopate Schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The station probably will utilize the tower of the Chicago Temple and is expected to cost $50,000. The Radio Bible Service Bureau has already been established in Cincinnati, to broadcast Bible readings for each day of the year. A station is being established at the Vatican.

The Young Women's Christian Association has launched a nationwide campaign for $250,000 with which to re-establish the work for the girls and women of Japan. Makeshift barracks and inadequate equipment since the earthquake have greatly curtailed the activities of this organization in Japan.

The Church of Scotland and the United Free Church have sent a commission of inquiry to South America to determine the best means for providing churches for the thousands of Scottish people engaged in the wool trade of Patagonia.

An expedition left England during last October to film the life and work of the missionary-explorer, David Livingstone. Reports from Central Africa indicate that the party has reached Victoria Falls after some thrilling adventures en route.

By order of the Turkish authorities in Constantinople, all Christian institutions must observe the Moslem Sabbath, which falls on Friday. This ruling affects Robert College and the American Woman's College. A former order exempting those institutions has been rescinded. Thus, with the Moslems observing a Friday Sabbath, the Jews Saturday and the Christians Sunday, Constantinople will run, normally, but four days out of every seven.

The Christian Century points out that, from a church viewpoint, it appears that the Roman Catholics won the war. Although they received a setback in Bohemia due to the organization of the National Church, the Roman Catholics have gained elsewhere. Latvia, long Protestant, is now Roman Catholic. In many parts of Europe, Protestantism is suffering because of an impoverished clergy. This is particularly true in Germany. Dr. Adolf Keller is in the United States to ask American support for European Protestants.

A series of international regional conferences among missionary workers to discuss the Christian world task are being held during March and April in North Africa and the Near East. Dr. John R. Mott has accepted the invitation of the International Missionary Council to preside at these meetings, the first of which will be held in Morocco, and the last, a general conference, in Jerusalem.

At High Pavement Unitarian Church, Nottingham, England, on a recent Sunday evening, Wagner's "Tannhauser" was substituted for the usual service. On the two succeeding Sundays, according to the announcement, "Lohengrin" and "Parsifal" are to be used in worship.

Perhaps no group in France has been so actively engaged in German relief as the members of French Protestant churches who, for many months, have sent generous help to fellow Protestants beyond the Rhine.

Scottish Christians have united in opposition to the smuggling of liquor into the United States by vessels flying the British flag. The Scottish Christian Union is a resolution, just received in this country, declares this to be "a scandalous traffic endangering the friendly relations of two kindred Christian countries."

Police Sergeant Saves Russian From Godiva Slur

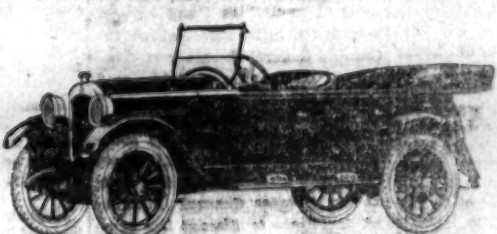

Clad in one trousers leg and a three-piece jacket which fell considerably short of the meridian, Sergey Plotnikoff, unemployed Russian 23 years of age, was gathered in by the police on Kiangnan Road Tuesday night on charges of soliciting alms from pedestrians.

By daylight, when it came time to take the prisoner to court, his costume appeared even more scanty than it had previously seemed and there was some debate at Central Station as to whether he might be taken through the streets without crashing one or more of the Municipal regulations and getting the Moral Welfare Society into a fret. The problem was solved when Sergeant Crowley, happening into the charge room, rapidly appraised the situation and raced blushing up to his quarters for one of his spare uniforms. Thus it was that Sergey appeared in the panoply of a Municipal policeman. His case was remanded for hearing before the Russian Assessor and he says he doesn't care how long the adjournment is because the chow he is getting at Central is the best he has had in many, many moons.

Exiled Greek King Pleads For Old Job

(Reuter's Service)
Bucharest, April 8.—An impassioned despatch to the Greek people from the exiled King George demands that he be restored to the monarchy. He declares that the violent suppression of principles on which the State is founded impels him to protest against the iniquity committed against the nation and to demand free exercise of the rights and duties of Royalty as laid down in the Constitution.

ANNUAL TREE PLANTING RITES HELD IN PEKING

Dr. Yen Carries Out Ching Ming Festival Ceremony

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, April 6.—Yesterday being the feast of Ching Ming, the annual tree-planting ceremony took place at the Temple of Heaven, Dr. W. W. Yen, Minister of Agriculture, officiating on behalf of the President. The Premier was represented by Mr. Wang Chi-tseng, Chief Secretary of the Cabinet and Dr. Wellington Koo by Mr. Shen Jui-ling. Most of the other Ministers were present in person.

As Dr. Yen planted the tree, the national anthem was rendered by the presidential band. Dr. Yen then gave an address, in which he dwelt on the significance of the ceremony in a country whose chief industry had been agriculture for centuries. It signified also, he said, the support which the Government intended to give to agriculture and he pointed out the importance of co-operation among all classes in this important sphere of national activity. In conclusion, the speaker cited several classical illustrations of the prominent part played by husbandry in China's history.

Presidential guards of honor were furnished for the occasion by the police and gendarmes, and the streets along which Dr. Yen and his escort passed on their way to the temple enclosure were lined with guards. The public was admitted, and quite a number of visitors were present to witness the ceremony. The Department of Agriculture and Forestry was represented by its Chief, Mr. Huang Hai-yl.

Several Warships Leave Nanking For Unknown Destination

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanking, April 8.—An order was issued today by Admiral Tu Shih-kai, Commander-in-Chief of the Chinese Navy, to Commander Li and the latter's Staff Officer, Lieutenant Huang, to despatch from Nanking waters one cruiser and several torpedo boats, according to naval authorities here. The vessels will leave tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock under secret instructions. Their destination is unknown even to officers of the vessels themselves.

Some of the officers speculate that they are being ordered to Fuzhou while others believe that their place of assignment is Hankow and Wuchang. Admiral Tu has been unusually busy recently and, in conversation with his staff, indicated that some military plan is under way.

The case of Mrs. P. Richterman, charged with failure to pay Municipal rates on property at 2-A Nanking Road, was again before the Mixed Court yesterday. The claim is for Tls. 450 and at the last hearing Assessor Martin took exception to the contention of Police Prosecutor Matland that the criminal court was the place for the suit. The Assessor said he could not see why it was not made a civil action. The prosecutor contended that for many years it had been the practice of the Municipality to sue criminally in such cases, and that the procedure had been laid down by Mr. Grant Jones when he was an assessor in the court. After further argument

Few Things In History Of Golf As Dramatic As "Mac" Smith's Comeback

Great Scotch Player, Once Ruined By Too Much
Nineteenth Hole Competition, Fights
Way Back To Game

Those who make it a habit to glance over the public prints of the day may have noticed of late that the name of Macdonald Smith has been making its appearance in the golf stories coming out from America.

"Macdonald Smith Wins" or "Mac-Smith Breaks Course Record" have headed more than one golf story during the past few months. Neither the headlines nor the stories, however, have yet told the true story of Smith, one of the most dramatic stories ever known in the history of sport.

The story starts like one of the Horatio Alger tales, in which the boy wonder sweeps everything before him and stands triumphant before the world with his knee parked upon the chest of a fallen victim and his fists clutched with gold dug from the pot that lies at the end of the rainbow.

It was on one of Harry Vardon's first trips to this country as a touring partner with the gigantic Ted Ray that the great genius of English golf dubbed Smith "the greatest golfer in the world, if he wants to be." This statement was uttered after Smith, alone, had beaten the Vardon and Ray best ball in an exhibition match at Wyke.

It was the only time during that particular trip that the two British stars suffered defeat. Later Macdonald Smith played himself into a triple tie for the American open championship, but in the play-off his brother, the brilliant Aleck Smith, won. He won because he played the better golf, but throughout that round Aleck was secretly hoping that his kid brother would go through to victory.

PLAYS 19TH HOLE
When he beat Vardon and Ray and when he tied for the American open championship Macdonald Smith was a brilliant golfer. He loved the great Scotch game and he loved other things that were Scotch and went with the game when the nineteenth hole had been reached. Because he was too fond of playing the nineteenth hole he began to slip and finally, a bit of human wreckage, he drifted West to the Pacific Coast and gave up the game in which he had shown so much promise.

Occasionally he hooked on somewhere at a golfing job, but the job didn't last long. Once a friend found him dazed, bleeding and hurt in a shadowy section of the San Francisco waterfront.

Thugs had assaulted him, beaten him senseless, robbed him of the few dollars he then owned and left him lying senseless on the street. The friend sent him to a hospital and for days he balanced on the thin edge of energy that divides death from life. It is the habit of Macdonald Smith to come back however, and he came back in the ward of that San Francisco hospital.

Shortly after his discharge from the hospital the United States declared war and Smith answered the call to arms of his adopted land. He enlisted as a private in the artillery, went overseas and there was afflicted with "gunner's ears" when the jolting roar of the big guns he served smashed his ear drums.

The scene of the human drama in which Macdonald Smith stars as the hero now shifts back to San Francisco and now a heroine makes her entrance. Smith decided to do something with himself after his discharge from the army, but he was quite certain that that something would have nothing to do with golf. The game he had once played so well had too many bitter memories for him. While he was still trying to plan his future work he met the very charming woman who is now his wife and she told him where he got on.

WIFE HELPED HIM
"Give up golf? Ridiculous, Macdonald. You have always proved yourself to be a genius at the game. You'll go back to it, master it and live up to the fine promise you showed in the beginning."

Thus the lady who is now Mrs. Macdonald Smith. It is evident that she had a fine philosophy of life. She also had a philosophy of health and self-control, the philosophy of Dr. Emile Coue, the little chemist of Nancy who tossed a healing phrase into the air from that gem-like French city and saw it circle a world of people looking for the sort of help he had to give.

"Day by day, in every way," Macdonald Smith began to play golf better and better. There is a legend now concerning his use of the Coue system, a story that has Macdonald Smith reassuring himself before every shot. "I can make this shot," he is said to assure himself. "I can make it perfectly." Whether the story be true or not, the fact remains that Smith does make a majority of his shots as perfectly as could be wished.

By February, 1923, Macdonald Smith had traveled a long way over the long trail that leads back to where he should have been and in that month he married the lady who wanted to trudge constantly at his side during the rest of the journey.

They left immediately for England on their honeymoon where Smith planned the climax of his comeback with the links of Troon, Scotland, and the drama of the British open championship as a fitting setting. At Troon the air was filled with the names of Hagen, Sarazen, Duncan, Mitchell and Kirkwood as the most likely winners. Then a Scotch caddy, a "boy" of some sixty odd blustering Scotch years, was asked what he thought of the championship.

"Man, there's only one golfer in the field," the caddy said, "and he's the greatest golfer in the world. It's Macdonald Smith I'm tellin' you about. He's a golfer to make you daft."

FOUR DIZZY ROUNDS
And the next day and the day after Macdonald Smith went out and did four of the dizziest successive rounds ever played at Troon. For a 67, two 68's and a 69. It was golf touched with magic; golf such as Smith plays when he is right.

The correspondents have already told the tragic story of how the worst breaks they ever saw on a golf course cost Smith a dozen strokes and how, in spite of those breaks, he broke the course record on his third round and then finished only two strokes back of Hagen, who won the British open title.

Even though he didn't win, his showing was a "comeback" and the lady who was showing him the way back greeted him with a triumphant smile when he finished. Smith won the California open for a fine field this year and before he is through he should win every major championship he cares to go running for. Besides the shots he has the iron stuff within him that makes a champion.

SPRING TRAINING AT PEKING IS IN FULL SWING

Racing More Popular Than Ever In The North

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Peking, April 6.—The Spring training is now in full swing at the Race Course. Racing seems to be more popular than ever, and it looks as though there would be an unusually good entry. Mr. Fraser seems to have the largest number of griffins in training, though Messrs. Weatherbe and Lucas run him close.

It is still too early to judge form but Mr. Henningsen has a fine griffin, if he does not develop into a puller, and great things are expected of Mr. Baron's black. A promising sign for the future of racing is the number of small owners who are taking it up, and the number of syndicates owning one or more ponies.

Of the old ponies Boroon, Grey Cloud and Fuselage all look fit and well, particularly the latter; and Soorak, who gave great promise for the Spring Meeting last year, is back after spending some months in Mongolia.

The only thing unsatisfactory about the racing this Spring is the condition of the road leading to the course. This is now freely used by Chinese carts, and the surface has seriously deteriorated as the result.

No fast work has yet been done. Most of the ponies are doing slow canters, though some owners are letting their ponies do "last quarters," and no doubt there will be some interesting work from now on.

AMERICAN SCHOOL IS INTER-MIDDLE SCHOOL "CHAMP"

Win Both Games From Chinese 'Y' Day
School

BY K. S. CHANG
The Shanghai American School basketballers won the inter-middle school championship yesterday when they defeated the Chinese Y.M.C.A. Day School team by a score of 31 to 24.

The inter-middle basketball league was composed of nearly all the well-known middle schools in Shanghai, and because it had too many schools entered for the championship series. It was divided into two sections, A and B. The American School quintet was on the top of the "A" section and the "Y" Day School was the winner in the "B" section.

Two final games were to be played. The first one was played off last Saturday on the American School ground, and the American boys had easy time in taking the game, for the score was something like 79 to 8. The second one was played off yesterday on the "Y" floor, and the game was much better than the one of last Saturday.

Yesterday's game was fast and clean, and as the score was close, it caused a considerable amount of excitement among the spectators. It was only during the last two minutes the three baskets scored by the winners proved to be the deciding points.

Lee of the "Y" team opened the score with a long shot which set the American School players on their toes. The game then went on furiously and soon the S.A.S. players were in the lead. At the interval, the score was 13 to 7. For the second half, the Chinese played harder, and they were only one point behind the S.A.S. of a 18-17 count. The final score was 31 to 24.

Roy Squire, with six goals to his credit was the outstanding player of the S.A.S. team, while T. F. Chang starred for the losers.

Day By Day Philosophy

The Stupidest Crime

BY DR. FRANCK CRANE

Japan is supposed to have a system of education that compares favorably with that of any other nation. Japanese youth are eager to go to school. The higher schools, however, are totally inadequate to accommodate the number of applicants. Every year, therefore, a certain number of young people who can't find a place in the crowded schools, commit suicide.

I know few facts in the world so tragically appalling as this. It is not an indictment of Japan, but of mankind.

No nation in the world spends enough to improve and maintain education.

No other fact so reveals the low degree of our evolution as our neglect of education. We go on spending nine dollars out of every 10 of our revenue for wars, past, present and to come. And war is the price we pay for that stupid provincialism that makes us refuse to enter into world government. Only a few cents of the remaining one dollar out of every 10 do we spend for the most important thing in the world, education.

It is not a matter of theoretical discussion, but of life and death. As Mr. Wells said, modern civilization is a race between education and disaster.

We must build bigger steamships and taller office buildings, form larger corporations and stronger banks, lay out finer parks and museums, and decorate them with more statuary. Improve our trains de luxe, automobiles and flying machines, write books ever more clever and cynical, heighten our luxuries and intensify our sophistication, and think we are going on. We are going round and round like dancing dervishes, and meanwhile the keen-eyed chemist and the bat-eyed politician are preparing for the next war which shall bring chaos. We still dream of bringing about reforms by ramming them down the throats of adults, instead of the only sane way, teaching them to the coming generation.

Fatheaded mayors and fat-bellied aldermen still solemnly pass resolutions to improve the town, by which they mean paying the streets, hiring more policemen and otherwise spending money for "practical" purposes. All the while there are not enough school-rooms for the children to sit in and not enough teachers to instruct them. The teacher who should be looking after six children is compelled to look after 60, to the neglect of them all.

We talk about national preparedness, by which we mean training people to fight or to make money to pay for the fighter's keep. But the only real preparedness is in training people to think. No nation was ever destroyed except by one thing, ignorance, the inability to think clearly.

We are like a father who is spending all his money on a fine house to live in, an expensive automobile to ride in, servants to wait upon him, fine clothes to adorn him and lavish entertainment for his friends, but has no time to teach his children how to live and no money to spare to hire other people to do it for him.

We speak of the great problems of 30 years from now. Those who will have to meet those problems and settle them are the children who are playing in the streets today. To give serious attention to those problems and to neglect those people who will have to deal with them is most perfectly to act the fool.

American Foreign Trade In 1923

In the March issue of Commerce Monthly published by the National Bank of Commerce in New York the bank reviews America's foreign trade during 1923, stating that the great expansion in imports had reduced the balance of merchandise and specie in favor of the United States for the year to last eighty million dollars. Continuing the bank says:

"The year before the balance had approximately 675 millions, and in 1919 it totaled four and a half billion dollars. A generation had elapsed since total imports and exports had been as close to balance as was the case in 1923.

"Balancing the various groups of goods which comprise our foreign trade against each other affords some highly interesting comparisons. The United States is to a unique degree a self-sufficient nation and particularly in the field of agricultural products it has contributed largely to the essential requirement of other countries. Of the four great commodities—copper, meats, grains, and cotton—which come instantly to mind when our export trade is considered, three are products of the farm. It is, therefore, of real significance that the 1923 imports of agricultural products into the United States were considerably greater than were its exports of this type. Net export balances were greater in machinery and vehicles and in nonmetallic minerals than in any other groups of merchandise. Heavy export of automobiles and refined petroleum products accounted largely for the extremely favorable balance in these groups.

"A noteworthy item is the balancing of textile exports by imports. Before the war, such exports were nearly 60 percent greater than corresponding imports. Since the war the export surplus of textiles has been steadily diminished; in 1923 imports outbalanced exports. This is significant, because cotton, which alone makes up over 80 percent and with its manufactures nearly 95 percent of textile exports, is by far our major export and because exports of cotton have, in the past, comprised a larger proportion of domestic output than exports of any other important product.

"The recovery of exports from the postwar slump has been much less marked than was the case with imports," says the bank, which adds:

"Although manufactures made up half of the 1923 merchandise export trade, they do not exert nearly so powerful an influence on the domestic business of the country as does the somewhat small aggregate of exports of raw materials and foodstuffs. Exports of manufactures are extremely diversified, and there are few lines in which the export trade comprises any considerable part of total production. Consequently prices in domestic markets of manufactured goods are not directly affected by conditions abroad. In the case of certain raw materials and foodstuffs of outstanding importance quite the reverse is true. The world demand for such things as cotton, wheat, tobacco, holly products and copper plays an appreciable part in determining the prosperity of large sections of the United States.

"Summarizing the position of 1923, a great gain in merchandise imports, coupled with a continued large gold inflow, practically balanced the total outflow of goods and gold for the first time in a generation. The huge volume of imports reflected the high level of activity in domestic industry, in which the bulk of imported merchandise is utilized. When the activity slackened, the rate of imports also declined. Exports, on the whole, showed no great expansion. This was due primarily to lessened exports of foodstuffs, a reflection of better crops in Europe and increased competition from other food-producing regions. Exports of American manufactures showed gains which, in view of the continued difficulties in international commerce, must be regarded as satisfactory.

"The trend in 1923 was in line with the long-run tendency of our foreign trade. Imports have included an increasing proportion of crude materials, while exports have tended strongly toward manufactures. In making any estimate of the longer future, consideration must be given to certain factors tending to modify this trend. One of these is the eventual rehabilitation of European productivity. Europe being to an even much greater degree than the United States a surplus producer of manufactured goods. A second most significant factor is the tendency toward the diffusion of industry and the development of local manufacturing markets for fabricated goods. The development in the United States is in itself a most striking example of this very process, for it is only within comparatively recent years that it has become a net importer of raw materials and foods and a net exporter of manufactures. The world-wide tendency thus illustrated is, perhaps, of less significance to our own foreign trade than to that of manufacturing nations less favorably situated as to supplies of raw materials. Even so, it is a factor not to be overlooked."

Dancers Who Can't Dance

An Appeal To The Men

BY JOHN BLUNT

Now that everybody dances to such an extent that dancing has become the usual appendage to a dinner, it is very odd how few people seem to know how to dance correctly.

There are only three dances danced with any frequency—the fox-trot, the waltz, and the blues—and nothing could well be simpler than their ordinary steps, and yet, if one goes, say, to a restaurant and watches the people who are dancing, only about one couple in six appears to know what modern dancing consists in.

The fearful and wonderful steps they perform are very impressive, but they bear about as much relation to up-to-date dancing as the year before last's fashions, do to the dresses of today. A man who would not dream of appearing at a social function unsuitably attired is, nevertheless, often content to dance in a manner which, from the dancing point of view, is prehistoric.

THE MEN'S FAULT
Indeed, I think the fault is almost entirely with the men. Most girls seem to know the modern style if their partner will give them a chance.

It must be remembered that dancing is one of the few things left in which men have an advantage over women, in that women have to follow the steps which their partners choose.

In my observation many men are quite content so long as they can get round the room, and their partners, I should imagine, must be put to an agony of confusion by their strange antics. I have little doubt but that most of these men believe themselves to be rather expert, but I would suggest to them that dancing is an accomplishment which requires to be kept up to date in the same way as one keeps up to date the shape of one's collar or the cut of one's coat.

Some people, of course, pool-pool all changes in fashion, but are quite content so long as they can get round the room, and their partners, I should imagine, must be put to an agony of confusion by their strange antics. I have little doubt but that most of these men believe themselves to be rather expert, but I would suggest to them that dancing is an accomplishment which requires to be kept up to date in the same way as one keeps up to date the shape of one's collar or the cut of one's coat.

PLEASE YOUR PARTNER

Moreover, in dancing you cannot simply please yourself. You must please your partner, and must make dancing easy for the other dancers in the room.

If all on the floor follow their own sweet way the result is confusion for the dancers and ugliness for the lookers-on. Nothing is more charming than to watch a roomful of good dancers all dancing rhythmically as one, and nothing is more absurd than to watch bad dancers of different styles colliding with one another and getting in each other's way.

It is all very well for people to assert that they like dancing in their own style—it only proves that they don't know how much enjoyment can be got out of dancing and how much enjoyment it is possible to give a partner. If they could overhear some of the comments of their partners who have been made to look ridiculous, who have had their toes trodden on, and who have been knocked into other people as though the dance had been a kind of free fight, they might begin to perceive that dancing is an art well as a form of exercise.

A SIMPLE ART

But it is a simple art which anybody can acquire. Like everything else the fashion in dancing is always changing, but it changes gradually and naturally and there is no difficulty in keeping up with these changes. None at all. If one is dancing several times a week, as hundreds of thousands of people in this country are, surely it is worth while learning how to dance!

This is an article in defence not only of dancing, but also of women. It fills me with distress to think of all the women who might have to dance with men whose idea of dancing is, to say the least, rudimentary. And perhaps my solitude has been heightened by observing expressions of pain on the faces of my own partners—perhaps. It is not a point I propose to dwell on. As an advocate of dancing, I earnestly suggest that all dancing men should keep abreast of the art. Quite apart from their own enhanced pleasure, they will find a wonderful expansion in their popularity. A keen dancer who cannot dance is one of the most shunned people on earth. And rightly so.

Jazz--Ancient And Modern

Players in the orchestra of Paris and Monteverdi 300 years ago were expected to be able to improvise counterpoint expertly. The music of the Russian and Hungarian gypsies is a pattern of riotous improvisation throbbing with communicative heat, restless in mood. The supreme test in skill for players in American jazz orchestras is, traditionally, an ability to improvise expertly. Thus is musical history repeated.

The term "jazz" has been subject to suspicion, to frequent scorn, and to considerably less than dignified consideration in many quarters. A number of individuals have, however, spent time in study and analysis of jazz music, and their analysis leads steadily, if slowly, toward the lifting of it from the realm of either suspicion or lack of dignity.

When Maurice Ravel visited America in 1920 he informed Prof. Edward Burlingame Hill of the music department at Harvard University that he believed "jazz was America's only original contribution to music." Another writer has said: "The elements of jazz are the raw materials of all music presented with primitive simplicity. The rhythms are ardent, the melodies, simple and sharply articulated, and the form concise."

The same writer has shown that folk songs of continental peoples have traditionally been the deposited sentiment of centuries of submerged folk life, and that into their lyrics have crept the unmistakable element of rusticity. Until the middle of the nineteenth century the "Massemensch" was the stent, agricultural population of the Continent, the music of which was, therefore, necessarily, out-of-doors music, which looked away from weary labor, yet reflected its shadows through its wildest abandon. The modern "Massemensch" is a creature of paved, light streets, whose music is jazz. Its chief component is rhythm when its complexity needs no intermediary to make its appeal.

It is not possible to deny the existence of jazz. "To do so is to assume the classic ostrich pose, and to shout alarm is to exhibit overconfidence in clamorous indignation as a purifier of morals." There is good and bad jazz just as there is good and bad playing of Chopin. The best of jazz is considered by united authorities to be infinitely more original, perhaps even musically better, than the so-called popular music of America produced in the "good old days." The makers of infernal din, engaged in poorly imitating the admirable savage, the savage who so skillfully sounds pulsatile instruments, represent bad jazz. The savage would scorn such tricks as rubbing bits of sandpaper together. Equally, the savage is more cultured than the person who belabors a piano with his whole body.

"Jazz," as applied to a musical literature, may be a flexible term, embracing not only disordered sound, but the sort of sound that refines upon frenzied notes with an influence distinctly and engagingly musical. Good jazz unites elements that seem individually to be incompatible. The foundation was laid for its advent twenty years ago, and its evolution shows something unique and unmatched. Fifteen years ago America was in the coo-song, ragtime period. Dr. Engel has indicated that in 1915, "in the second act of a mildly entertaining operetta melody, which was not extraordinary in itself, but which marked a change," appeared. It was more than the sign of a change in American popular music. It was a liberation. Harmonic richness and variety triumphantly took the place of stereotyped cadences of barren, threadbare progression. Of its composer, Mr. Jerome Kern, it has said: "When he tried to be purely melodic he was inclined to fall back on cheap sentimentalism, tinged with spurious folk-song color, but his harmonic device known as 'blues' had hue."

"Blues" have been variously defined. There was the famous, but often unremembered, "blue chord" of Richard Wagner, devised to make more graphic the word "blau" in the first part of "Tristan and Isolde." This, of course, is descriptive "blues" as "ambiguous chords, altered notes, extraneous modulations and deceptive cadences." If the Wagner "blue chord" is the sublime, the ridiculous instance might be noted in the "maudlin glissando of the ukulele or steel guitar."

The contrapuntal complexity of jazz appears to be nativeborn, out of the complex, strident, present-day American life. The "turgid song of saxophones, the capers of clarinets, the darting influence of flutes, the high lights cast by drums and xylophones," these combine in a music recklessly fantastic, joyously grotesque, without a superb, incomparable creation, inescapably yet illusive. Deliberately scored, jazz is, almost without exception, clumsy and pedestrian. In good jazz each player must be an originator of musical color. Good jazz, once subject to unclouded criticism, reveals some finer lineaments which entitle, it at least, to the benefit of honest doubt.

John Alden Carpenter did not glorify "Krazy Kat." George Herriman's "triumphant and immortal philosopher," in a "Krazy Kat Ballet" for nothing. George Copeland doubtless includes an example of jazz music in his program, upon his return to the American concert stage, for the same reason that impels Guy Maier and Lee Pattison to play jazz studies. Eva Gauthier sings a group of modern jazz studies with conspicuous effect. They are artists believing in the artistic merit of jazz. Although each ingredient of jazz has undeniably American racial features, jazz cannot be called purely tribal. It does not content itself with borrowing from the Negro and the Indian, but it holds marks of Oriental infections, hints of the Jordan rather than of the Congo River, and weaves, too, the luxurious harmonic sense of the Semite with the primitive syncopations of the colored man. In view of all this, is it possible to dismiss jazz as merely "the chaotic and unreliable accompaniment of modern dance prevarications?"

Early Chinese Jades

EARLY CHINESE JADES. By Dame Una Pope-Hennessy. London, Ernest Benn Ltd.

Many who have observed the rapidly increasing interest taken in early Far Eastern art attempt to explain this movement by saying that scholars and art dealers alike are seeking new ground for their operations. Such a conclusion is surely mistaken. The present generation is feeling its way toward the kind of art which satisfies its needs, just as every preceding generation has done, just as every child seeks his food when he is hungry.

The present generation is very hungry indeed. It is making the discovery that the ephemeral activities which produce money and the struggle of trade and industry satisfy only a small portion of its wants. Those who see in the visual arts an endeavor which leads to the recognition of rather more permanent values live artistically on their aspirations. Western aspirations have been changing ever since the end of last century; geographically the trend has been eastward, and historically it has tended to the earliest dawn of civilisation. The reasons for this change throw light on the nature of ancient Chinese art and they are therefore worth consideration.

The ideal to which Europe has aspired for many generations has been the Greek ideal. The Western view of fine Greek sculpture has been that the representation of the human form was brought by the artists of Greece to such a pitch of perfection that their works hardly pertain to the realm of human action, but rather to the ill-defined region where inspiration gives a quality of unearthly beauty to an image made by hands. Very broadly speaking—and I am well aware that isolated instances would seem to disprove my assertion—Europe has attempted artistically to emulate the Greeks.

The history to art from the Renaissance to the Romantics of the nineteenth century is, in a sense, the record of attempts to surpass nature by selecting various aspects which in combination shall embody the essence of nature herself. Sculpture, for example, has selected the fairest limbs from a thousand bodies and, by selecting those which seemed best to the sculptor, set up an image of perfection. The standard by which this image was judged is the Greek standard, whose aim may be defined as an idealized and selective imitation of nature. We call those artists inferior whose qualities are confined to a limited concept of idealizing and selecting from nature, and we call those artists supreme who have given adequate expression to something they have divined rather than selected.

If we review the vast activity of European art we find an age imbued with a profound emotion has been propitious to fine art. Great emotion requires direct expression; the greatest emotion Europe has experienced has been religion, hence the wealth of Italian, French, German and Flemish religious art. Hence, too, the cathedrals and churches of medieval Europe.

From this very brief survey it will be seen that the nature of European art has been essentially concrete. The change which has come and is still coming over modern appreciation is due to the fact the present generation suffers from a surfeit of concrete values. Abstraction of form and content in art has become not merely a fashionable cry but an inward necessity and therefore we turn to China.

The greatest Chinese art, that is, early Chinese art, is also largely based on religion; most of the specimens we know are vessels and implements used during worship, or statues of gods and goddesses. The essential difference between Chinese and European art lies, however, in the attitude the two traditions have brought to the function of art. The European tradition attempts to select from and improve upon the phenomena of the visual world. The Chinese tradition suspends of the validity and merit of the experiences and sensations of the living individual, is much more abstract and inventive.

The ancient carver of a jade animal was not interested in devising, for instance, a miniature horse of perfect proportions in the Greek sense of the term. He was interested in the abstract qualities a horse connoted in his thoughts. He delighted in its power of motion, caring nothing for the relative length and proportion of one limb to another. If he wanted to represent the particular horse of an honored ancestor he would give to his carving the attributes of the ancestor, though the form used for its expression would be that of a horse. In short, representation did not interest him. The Chinese artist was so engrossed in symbols that he conventionalized his forms. His freedom from any desire for representational verisimilitude also made him pay enormous attention to the suitability of his medium to his subject. In the process of carving a piece of jade he would find that the natural markings or the veins of the stone suggested some particular design, whose dictates he would follow at once. The result is that every fine early Chinese jade suggests the fitness of the medium to the sculptured object.

From an aesthetic point of view this attitude of the Chinese carver gives him a great advantage over European tradition. Occidentals are accustomed to force subject upon medium, and the result is often a lack of harmony which spoils a fine conception. The tradition of jade carving in China is older than any record of it, and it has continued to the present day; as time went on, sheer skillfulness appears to have increased, although the creative faculty waned. As we approach modern times jade carving becomes more precious, losing its early and mysterious grandeur.

For this reason it is not pedantic to demand conscientious dating of specimens. The dating by an authority is often the only guide the student has to the study of a given period of Chinese culture. And in this respect Dame Una Pope-Hennessy, author of "Early Chinese Jades," has fallen below the high standard which she would like us to set her. She has believed patiently in the early chronicles such as the "Chou Li," and she has succumbed to the temptation of every collector to ante-date many pieces. She forgets that the reverence of the Chinese for antiquity made them copy early forms. These copies bear, however, the signs of a later tradition.

But if we must accept her enthusiastic, not to say fantastic, dates with considerable reserve, we can have nothing but admiration for her painstaking research into the history of the early Chinese jades. She has amassed a wealth of information taken from original Chinese sources, and every student will be grateful for the valuable introduction she has provided to a subject which is as yet little explored. The author and her readers owe no mean debt to the publishers, who have presented the numerous plates and the text in a manner which well befits the beauty of the subject. Higher praise would be impossible to bestow.

The Rising Tide Of Republicanism

So Greece is going republican, and the wheel of fate swings round again to the democracies! It is interesting to recall that nearly all our political terminology comes from Greek; often through Latin, it is true; and the latest development takes one back to the great ancient idealist and to the things he stood for and dreamed of, those things that "prophets and priests desired long but died without the sight." And we shall do the same, for not in our time will come the perfect state, or anything like it, says the Far Eastern Times. Greece has arrived not without travail at the point at which she stands today. The great decline of ancient Greece was followed by centuries of misgovernment under the Turk, and the 19th of next month will see the centenary of the death of Byron, whose love of liberty was no academic thing, moving him as it did to give himself in person to the Greek struggle for independence, a struggle that was sympathetically viewed by the whole of Europe. The long story of eventual freedom and of the establishment and fall of an alien dynasty lies within the compass of this hundred years, and as one has watched the uneasy movements of the past few years and wondered what the fate of the nation would be one has recalled both the picture and the prophecy of those days:

Beneath the surface of Time's fleeting river,

Its wrinkled image lay. Immovably unquiet; and for ever. It trembles, but it cannot pass away.

Greece is following in the footsteps of half the nations of Europe. Nearly twenty years ago Portugal took the lead, expelling her monarchy and set up her democratic constitution. The Great War upset half a score of dynasties—the Tzittobad Dynasty, the Wickerback Dynasty and half the Almanach de Gotha have disappeared from ken, the Gadafene rush being led by the greatest autocrats of Europe. Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia have broken up into a half-score of republics, each taking its fate in its own hands after wrenching it from the grasp of apparently impregnable absolutism.

The monarchical principle serves its purpose for a time. It has its place in the normal development of political institutions. But it has in it the seed of its own decay. The more absolute the monarchy the surer is it to meet destruction, and the more complete the smash when it does come. The more the institution is diluted by being limited, the firmer it remains; but it is worth noting that where the monarchy is based on a flexible or unwritten constitution its equilibrium is more stable than where it is founded upon the seemingly more solid foundation of a rigid written document. With the rigid constitution every minute divergence from the written law promptly creates a resentment that may easily be fanned into an open rupture. Where everything depends on precedent it is more or less unconsciously realised that divergence from the accustomed may be due to the fact that the accustomed must under the new circumstances be modified. For a time, indeed, matters may hang in doubt. The recent question in Great Britain, whether the King could refuse, on request of a newly-appointed Prime Minister, commanding only a minority of the House of Commons, to dissolve Parliament, is an illustration ready to hand. Opinions differ, and the matter, though it has not yet come to be a direct practical issue, is being thrashed out by constitutional lawyers of all shades of opinion, so that by the time it does actually become a practical issue the public mind is prepared for almost any settlement of the question. The rigid constitution, especially in its monarchical form, does not afford opportunity for give and take, preceded by the ventilation of the problem by the free breeze of publicly expressed opinion.

The present century has seen republics springing into being everywhere—from Austria to Azerbaijan, from China to Czechoslovakia, from Germany to Georgia, from Portugal to Poland; and there is no telling where the movement will end. Greece is at the parting of the ways, and Persia is trying to make up its mind: At present north-west Europe is fairly solidly monarchical in form, but the form is more apparent than the fact. It is this which gives the best assurance of the continuance of such monarchy as there is. Once monarchy were to try to begin to be anything more than a convenient form and ceremony, it would be crushed beneath the weight of its own ambitions. Monarchy finds its best maxim to be, Let sleeping dogs lie.

FILIPINO MISSION TO BE GUESTS AT RECEPTION HERE

President Of Senate And Other Distinguished Men Arrived Saturday

Next Saturday, at nine o'clock in the evening, the local Filipino colony will hold a reception in honor of the members of the Third Philippine Parliamentary Mission who are expected to arrive in Shanghai, on their way to the United States that afternoon at four o'clock, on board the President Jackson. The reception will take place at the Ningpo Hall, 4 Thibet Road. It will not have any political character and will be a purely social affair. No speeches will be delivered during the evening. Many prominent people of Shanghai have been invited to attend the gathering, which will be a simple demonstration of friendship, good will and sympathy toward the prominent visitors by their personal friends in the locality.

The members of the Philippine Parliamentary Mission who are coming on the President Jackson are: Hon. Manuel L. Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate, Chairman of Mission and President of the Nacionalista Con-

LONGING FOR MORNING!

A Talk To The Sufferer From Insomnia.

With what satisfaction you have retired after a particularly fatiguing day! "A good night's rest and I shall be as fresh as a daisy in the morning," you say to yourself. But sleep refuses to come. The hours seem interminable as you toss and turn longing for slumber, and your brain works as if on wheels, puzzling out problems, magnifying troubles, giving you no rest or peace. May be more than once in the night you rise in despair and look at the clock, longing for daylight to appear.

What is the cause of these attacks of insomnia? The answer is to be found by studying for a brief while the condition of your general health. You have felt tired and dispirited during the day, work has been a trouble, people have seemed vexatious, you have not found enjoyment either in food or recreation. The fact thus becomes obvious that because of overwork, worry, need of a rest and change, or some other reason you have drained almost to the limit your reserve of nervous energy.

And how can further attacks of this insomnia be avoided? The answer to this is, by building up your health through the blood by tonic treatment, for which purpose nothing can be better than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

For five and thirty years Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been world-famous as a blood builder and nerve tonic. Not only do they purify and enrich the blood, but they create new, rich, red blood which imparts fresh life and vigor to all the organs of the body. Their first effect usually is to stimulate the appetite; then the spirits revive, and insomnia gives way to health-restoring sleep. For sufferers from anaemia, neurasthenia, general weakness, digestive troubles, the ill-effects of illness, overwork, mental or physical exhaustion, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a restorative of the utmost value. Your chemist sells them, or post free, $1.50 per bottle, $8.00 for 6 bottles, from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, 60 Kingsway Road, Shanghai.

YOU CAN BE CERTAIN OF QUALITY WHEN YOU BUY RUBBER GOODS

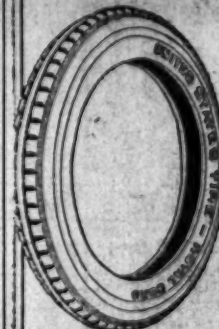

There are just two ways of spending your money when you buy one or more of the thousands of different articles made of or in combination with rubber.

One way is to take chances—to gamble and buy just a tire, inner tube, hot-water bottle or pair of over shoes.

The other way is to buy the good rubber products of the largest manufacturer of rubber goods in the world, the United States Rubber Company.

When you buy any article bearing the trade mark of the United States Rubber Company you know it is good—uniformly good. For now, with the United States Rubber Company's two new revolutionary discoveries—The New Sprayed Rubber and The New Web Cord—you are assured of the purest rubber ever produced, with its natural properties unimpaired and uniform quality throughout.

Look for the "U.S." trade mark when next you buy anything made of or with rubber.

The Wonders of Glass Used for Eyeglasses

Crystals of marvelous clearness are found in rocks, caves and along river beds. The Brazilian, Indian, Eskimo or African native who picks them up has no idea of their true nature. Crystals of carbon, silica and salt look alike but they are as different as silk, wool and cotton. So are the hundred and one kinds of manufactured glass.

The glass used for microscopes and cameras will not do for eyeglass lenses any more than the glass used in electric bulbs or watch crystals. Only one kind will do.

Curiously enough this one kind of glass contains gas, yet bubbles are seldom formed. If one bubble is found, however small, the eyeglass lens is thrown in the scrap box.

Every pair of O.I.C. Glasses, just as every pair of Wellsworth lenses now being worn, is made of glass which was examined by delicate instruments to find out if its optical density was exactly right. If 1/100,000-th of an inch out of place the fact is revealed.

The same care and precision that are exercised in the scientific tests for the selection of the proper glass are also employed in each and every one of the processes involved in making O.I.C. Glasses.

IN A FEW WEEKS THE STRONG SUN- LIGHT WILL BE HERE—the blinding rays reflected from the pavements and buildings will not only cause eyestrain and headaches, but also physical exhaustion.

The harmful rays in light, called the "ultra-violet" or "poison rays" will cause many ill effects besides fatigue and hardening of the lens of the eye.

IF YOU DO NOT NEED GLASSES to see with you should have a pair of perfectly plain O. I. C. Crookes' Glass Lenses to protect your eyes.

Coloured glasses of the ordinary kind are better than none at all, but often the lenses are of unequal density and made of cheap glass which is not optically clear so that you subject your eyes to strain.

By grinding our Crookes' glass lenses in our own factory on the premises, we can guarantee that our "Plane" lenses are accurate and perfectly clear.

It is almost as much work to grind up a PERFECTLY PLAIN (optically accurate) lens as it is a difficult prescription. That is why it is only by accident that you obtain a clear glass in the ordinary "Sun-Glasses".

The regular charge for Crookes lenses is from $10 to $20 (depending on the prescription, size, shape etc.) but you can obtain them this week for $5.00 at the O. I. C.

IF YOU WEAR GLASSES you can have the same prescription ground from this wonderful glass invented by Sir William Crookes.

O. I. C. Crookes' Glasses are made up in TORIC from (deep curved lenses) which conform to the shape and movement of the eyeball and provide a larger field of vision.

IF YOU NEED GLASSES you should have your eyes examined by our experts and the proper lens prescription can then be ground into your Crookes' lenses for wear outdoors this summer.

We have the largest and latest stocks of every description of frames and mountings, including styles in gold, gold-filled, silver, shell, platinum, and combinations of shell and gold, silver and gold, etc.

WE HAVE A SCIENTIFIC METHOD of examining eyes, by the latest and most up-to-date instruments in the Orient, thus ensuring glasses which we unreservedly GUARANTEE.

Our standard guarantee is your assurance—If our glasses are not entirely and completely satisfactory, for any reason, and regardless of who fitted them, we authorize you to bring us the prescription of any other oculist, when we will fit it with a new pair of glasses FREE OF CHARGE—can we say more? A fatter offer has never made.

The most prominent business and professional men in Shanghai are wearing O. I. C. Glasses—we are very proud of this fact—we can point to hundreds of satisfied patients, including the foremost Doctors, Lawyers, Councillors and business men.

DO NOT BE SATISFIED WITH ANY BUT THE BEST GLASSES AND SERVICE

Will Construct 'Quake Memorial' Tokio Hospital

A permanent memorial hospital to commemorate America's assistance to the Japanese earthquake sufferers, is soon to be erected in Tokyo, according to a decision of the Japanese government, entrusted with the remainder of the funds raised for the earthquake relief.

Mr. Jefferson Caffrey, Charge d'Affaires of the American Embassy at Tokyo, was authorized on March 15, to draw upon the American National Red Cross for $2,000,000, to be used by the Japanese government to erect a memorial hospital. According to the "Red Cross Courier," the weekly magazine of the National Red Cross, Washington, the administration of American relief by the efficient Japanese organization has saved the heavy expense of transporting and maintaining large units of relief personnel in Japan. Two small contingents of American Red Cross workers, one from Manila and Shanghai, had been on the spot on the scene and won the unanimous praise of the Japanese government for their efforts.

These are chiefly: A dearth of skilled workmen, and a scarcity of building materials.

At present 718 houses have been completed, and 961 are in course of erection, but this is not nearly enough to meet the demand.

The output of workmen in the building of houses in Belfast, is reported to be seriously less, than that of workmen in any town in England, a fact as enlightening as it is shameful.

The Government subsidy of £227,500, has enabled the Corporation to sell houses, which would have cost from £300 to £1,300, at reduced prices ranging from £300 to £500.

SHIPMENT OF CATTLE

The Ulster Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, has been investigating the conditions under which cattle have been shipped to England.

Some of the revelations were truly shocking. All animals bore evidence of severe and unnecessary stick punishment, and many animals had to be killed owing to their inability to stand on their feet.

Reports from Glasgow, stated that cattle had frequently arrived there in a horrible condition. Some of the beasts were dead on arrival, others had their whole

England won, after a spirited game.

The Admiralty have recently sent H. M. S. Caroline, to Belfast, to be used as a training ship for the Ulster Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve.

All local arrangements, and the command, are in the hands of Captain Hartland Muih.

SHAKESPEAREAN PLAYS

Belfast lovers of the drama, are at present enjoying a rare treat, for Mr. Charles Doran and his Shakespearean Company are giving a season at the Grand Opera House.

Their program includes: "Julius Caesar," "Hamlet," and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

THE JAZZ MANIA

The jazz-mania has spread to Belfast. Nowhere is dancing more popular.

The most popular of the weekly dances are Mrs. Latimer's new famous "Tee Dances," which are held at the ballroom of "Ye Olde Castle Restaurant" on Wednesday afternoons, and she is spoken of respectfully by the youth of the city.

Housing Problem Acute: Shameful Cruelty In Shipment Of Cattle: England Wins Rugby Game: Belfast Gets A Training Ship: Belfast Has Varied Amusements

(By Our Own Correspondent)

Belfast, Feb. 14.—Here, as in England, the shortage of houses is acute, and provides a subject for constant debates and meetings.

In spite of these continual discussions, however, the work does not proceed in a very satisfactory manner, the problem being a difficult one and the drawbacks numerous.

These are chiefly: A dearth of skilled workmen, and a scarcity of building materials.

At present 718 houses have been completed, and 961 are in course of erection, but this is not nearly enough to meet the demand.

"Began to think she would never get well."

Our Patient is of Miss FLORENCE ORGAIN, of 100, Clark Street, Ladywood, Birmingham, England, whose father writes:

"My daughter Florie was suffering with a very bad head covered with sores and eruptions, and in fact her mother was afraid to comb her hair. She had been under several doctors, but all to no purpose, so I began to think she would never get well again and lose all her hair. As soon as I saw your advertisement, I bought a bottle of your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' and gave her a few drops."

"Blood Mixture" cured her of all her troubles in less than a fortnight. She is now a healthy, happy girl, and her hair is growing again. I am pleased to say it effected a wonderful cure in just over a fortnight."

SUFFERERS FROM Bad Legs, Rheumatism, Ulcers, Glandular Swellings, Piles, Eruptions, Scabs, Blotches, Sores, Pinworms, Eruptions, Rheumatism, Gout, should realize that lotions and ointments can but give temporary relief; to be sure of complete and lasting benefit the blood must be thoroughly cleansed of the impure waste matter the root cause of such troubles. Clarke's Blood Mixture quickly attacks, overcomes and expels the impurities that cause so many miserable nervous stand in the credit. Pleasant to take, and free from injurious ingredients.

ON PRINTING BILLS

We have a testimonial from a local firm who saved Tls. 3,000 on their printing bills, by using a for reproducing their new code. By this method their code was finished quicker and more privately than could have been done outside. They also reproduce their office forms, engineering specifications, diagrams, and form letters.

MIMEOGRAPH and MIMESCOPE

You may not have so much printing to do as this firm, but if you use form letters, or printed forms of any kind a MIMEOGRAPH will save money for you. Let us show you how.

What an Avalanche in the Alps Did to an American Girl

It Buried Her, Scalped Her, and but for a Lucky Ledge and a Miraculous Rescue It Would Have Killed Her, High on the Jungfrau

"I looked upward. A stone came bounding by me. And then I saw, roaring and banging straight toward me, a great mass of loose earth, as if the whole mountain top were tumbling down."

Two face crushing, violent death—

To see it coming, an avalanche of rock—

To cling, helpless, to an icy slope, unable to move for seconds that seemed longer than hours—

Then a crash, blackness and oblivion.

Betty Short, San Francisco beauty, eighteen years old and an intrepid mountain climber, attempted the daring feat of scaling the Jungfrau, one of the tallest and most dangerous peaks in Switzerland, accompanied by a single guide.

When only a few hundred feet from the summit she was struck and buried by an avalanche of earth and rock. By what seemed a miracle she escaped death, and is now back in America, telling her friends of the thrilling and terrifying experience.

Her face was not marred by the tragedy, and she is as pretty as ever. But she wears a chic brunette wig, for she was almost scalped by the jagged rocks. Her head had to be shaved, and above her forehead, fortunately far enough back not to spoil her beauty, is a scar eight inches long, which she will probably carry to her death.

How does it feel to be buried by an avalanche?

"Few people have survived to tell about it, but Betty Short describes her experience with vivid simplicity.

"My mother and I had been in Zurich, spending the Summer. I had done some mountain climbing, with parties and guides, but nothing extraordinary. Later we went to the little town of Wengen, near the foot of the Jungfrau, one of the highest and most beautiful mountains in the Bernese Alps. I believe its summit is a little less than 14,000 feet.

"It is not so jagged as the Matterhorn, but a more or less symmetrical, towering cone, more like Mont Blanc. It has, of course, been climbed, but it is always a dangerous undertaking—long, steep, icy slopes, in which it is necessary to cut every foothold with an axe.

"As I sat at my hotel window, looking at the Jungfrau towering into the clouds, it occurred to me that it would be a really wonderful thing for a young American girl to do—to reach the top.

"Friends tried to deter me. They pointed out, and it was true, that sixteen people, some of them native-born Swiss guides, had been killed during the Summer. And only two days before I undertook the ascent an English climber, Sir Arthur Hayden, and two guides had perished on those very slopes.

"For some reason these tragedies made me only the more unwilling to give up the project. So one morning, with several trusted guides, I went in a motor car to the base of the mountain, and we undertook the ascent. My costume was not at all like those you see in the movies. I wore trousers, loose ones, and over them, a heavy short smock, with a fur-lined hood attached. The first two hours were hard, uphill walking.

"Then we came to the real ascent, steep, mostly covered with ice. Before beginning it, a guide fastened a stout rope around my waist and the other end around his own, so that we were attached by a length of some thirty feet.

"Sometimes we came to crevasses, treacherous rifts in the ice, which had to be skirted, or to snowdrifts in depressions, around which we had to go.

"But as the morning wore on, we got by these things safely. We

"My costume for mountain climbing was not at all like those which you see in the movies," says Miss Short, snapped just before her perilous ascent.

were only a few hundred feet from the summit when the tragedy occurred. It was caused by a very peculiar circumstance. One speaks of the 'eternal snows' on the summits of Alpine peaks like the Jungfrau, and the snow there does seem almost everlasting. But last Summer, for the first time in many years, part of the snow on the summit had melted, leaving rocks, stones and boulders bare.

"It seems that some of these got loose and started sliding down the slope. As they slid, they dislodged others. I was clinging to the steps cut by the guide in the ice, on a steep slope, but luckily just a few feet above a rocky platform. The guide was working a little higher, and at almost the full length of the rope, off at the right. Had he been closer to me, we both would have been killed.

"We both heard a rumbling far above our heads. We must have heard it simultaneously, for at the same instant I also heard him shout a warning.

"I looked upward. A stone, and then another, came bounding by me. And then I saw, roaring and banging straight toward me, several hundred feet above, a great mass of stones and loose earth, until suddenly it seemed as if the whole mountain top were tumbling down.

"I think that in the first instant I realized exactly what it was. I was directly in the path of an avalanche, and I believed that I would surely be killed. There was nothing I could do. I just clung to the rock and waited for death.

"I think it is true that in such moments the mind races in a way that makes the time seem longer than it really is. In the

"A boulder had struck Miss Short on the head. She had been knocked unconscious and thrown to the plateau, where she was buried beneath stones, dirt and snow."

few brief seconds before I was struck by the avalanche I remember several definite reflections. One was that my mother would be awfully unhappy. Another was to wonder how much pain I would feel. But my most vivid thoughts were of the waste and uselessness involved in such a death.

"It came, suddenly, like a thunder-clap. There was a crash, and then blackness. I remembered nothing more, until I regained consciousness the following day in the hospital at Wengen, with my mother and the doctors bending over me."

What had happened was that a boulder had struck Miss Short on the top of the head. She had been knocked unconscious and thrown to the shelving plateau a few feet below, where she was buried beneath stones and loose dirt. The guide escaped injury.

Five hours later, with the aid of eight other guides, she was taken down the mountain, still unconscious. By what seemed a miracle none of her bones was broken, and she had received no permanent injury other than the gash in her head.

She is now with her mother in New York, full of vitality and ambition, seemingly in perfect health. And perhaps the most extraordinary feature of her story is that she says: "If I live until next Summer, I am going back to Switzerland, and I am going to climb to the summit of the Jungfrau!"

The Chinese Banking Consortium

THE Chinese Banking Consortium will hold its annual meeting in Peking on April 15 and Chinese bankers from all parts of the country are said to be on the way to the capital to attend. When the Chinese Banking Consortium was organized in 1920-21 we remember reading many highly flattering articles to the effect that this was the organization which was to lead China out of the financial wilderness. One article which appeared in a leading financial paper in America stated that the Chinese Banking Consortium was to borrow money abroad and finance China, thus preserving China from the "aggressions" of the foreign financiers, who demanded security and guarantees for their loans. The Chinese Consortium started out with two major projects, the Shanghai Mint and the Railway Car Loan. We do not know what has happened to the Car loan, but the last reports available were to the effect that the foreigners who sold equipment to the Peking-Hankow Railway were still waiting for their money because of the interference of the militarists in the finances of this line, and from the standpoint of the Shanghai Mint the fine machinery ordered from the United States is still unpaid for and is rusting away in a godown somewhere while the new mint building located in Chapei stands empty and useless.

This year's meeting of the Consortium, according to the report sent out from Peking, is not to aim so highly as the first meetings and is to concern itself with currency reform mainly. The original and enthusiastic campaign to eliminate the tael in favor of the dollar is now to be put in abeyance and a mixed system of taels and dollars is to be recommended—which is exactly the situation in vogue at the present time.

According to the last issue of the China Year Book, there are now thirty-two Chinese banks in the Consortium, none of them being located south of Shanghai. In spite of the fact that South China has no representation in this organization, it should be able to exercise some influence in improving and unifying the finances of China and improving the currency situation. It ought to be able to exercise the greatest possible influence upon Government finance and there is need for this influence because of the havoc wrought in recent years upon China's foreign credit by Peking's political financial buccaneers. Another place where the Consortium could exert a potent influence is in connection with the financing of the militarists. If the Chinese bankers would cease supplying the funds, there would be no question of China's carrying out the terms of the Washington Conference resolution in respect to reduction of soldiers. Still another place where the Consortium should be able to help in a constructive way is in assisting China's recently established industries, especially the cotton spinning and weaving mills. There are reports in circulation that most of the fine new mills started by Chinese interests during and after the close of the European War are now passing into the hands of foreigners because of lack of capital—and inefficient management. The bankers ought to be able to help here. In America and Great Britain the bankers' associations have always been the most important influences behind sound finance—public and private—and there is no reason why the same condition should not prevail in China.

Becoming Accustomed To Taxes

ACCORDING to Mr. Julian Arnold, there is one redeeming element in the strenuous financial situation through which Canton is now passing. The Cantonese are receiving a liberal education on the subject of taxation. In order to support the hordes of mercenary soldiers brought into Canton by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, it has been necessary to put into force a taxation system modeled somewhat upon foreign lines, and although the taxes are onerous in the extreme, they are, nevertheless, taxes and South China is receiving at the present time a real education on this subject.

The Chinese people never have been taxed in the modern sense, that is possibly outside of the land tax and even that is handled on the ancient contract or "farming-out" system. Recently when the various provinces decided to levy a tax on cigarettes, the officials in most cases are reported to have used the method of selling the right to levy the tax to certain brokers who contracted to pay the provincial officials a lump sum for the privilege of collecting the tax from the tobacco merchants. This is the practice in respect to the salt tax and with likin and so on through the various avenues of revenue raising which the central and provincial Governments employ. In addition to these mediaeval methods of raising money, the militarists have developed their own methods, which mostly come under the general heading of blackmail. They notify a village or town that a certain amount of money is needed to support the troops, and if the money is not forthcoming they turn the troops loose on the town to collect their own taxes, which they do by looting the shops.

At the present time in Shanghai the Chinese authorities are attempting to raise money for the improvement of Soochow Creek, but instead of levying a modern tax for this purpose and floating a bond issue, as would be done anywhere else in the world, the provincial officials are simply asking for donations in lump sums from the various guilds and merchants who use the creek. There is absolutely no uniformity or idea of providing a fund for future maintenance.

Down in Canton scarcely a day goes by without the announcement of some new form of taxation. There are said to be fifty different kinds of taxes upon the silk industry alone. Persons who dine in restaurants pay a tax and persons who attend theaters pay a tax. All transfers of land are taxed and all merchants who rent shops pay a tax based upon the amount of the rental. In some cases, the taxes have been paid for two or three years in advance, so serious is the need for funds. As Mr. Arnold states, it is pretty serious, but at any rate the people are learning how to pay taxes in the modern sense—and this experience undoubtedly will be of benefit to the whole country in time.

The Cult Of Lawlessness

IN the first quarter of this year, inclusive of the first week of April, there were over forty cases of armed robbery in Shanghai, while in the course of last year there were no fewer than ninety-four instances where armed robbers entered and plundered dwelling houses and shops. These include three cases wherein robbery was accompanied by murder. Armed highway robberies totalled thirteen and there were two reports of armed robbery from boats in the Hongkew Creek.

This is truly a sinister record and reveals the growth of crimes of violence in the International Settlement. Emphasis of this undeniable fact is in no sense intended to cast an aspersion on the Municipal Police Force, than which there is no finer body of men and whose devotion to duty in the face of personal peril unquestionably accounts for many potential criminals being prevented from committing dangerous offences. It is well known that the local Police labor under a grave handicap in that the lawless section of the Chinese populace seem to have more or less ready access to firearms, and it is the apparent ease with which these weapons find their way in to the ranks of the criminals which is one of the strongest factors militating against the success of the Police in confining crimes of violence within narrower limits. During the past year, twenty-three foreigners and twelve Chinese were charged with offences connected with trafficking in firearms. Twenty-two were sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from eighteen months to five days, five were fined and eight were acquitted. The firearms seized by the Police in these cases reached a total of 135 pistols and revolvers and over 11,000 rounds of ammunition. The armed robbers, with this supply, would have been a much more serious danger than they were, and in view of the grave menace to the community implied by trafficking in arms, the sentences imposed appear ridiculous in the extreme. The maximum sentence in the Japanese Court, for instance, is 29 days. Such mild punishment is not likely to prove a deterrent to others bent on criminality. Trafficking in firearms, whether it be one or a hundred pistols or revolvers, in principle is a grave offence against the community and there should be some effort made by the responsible judicial authorities to make the punishment fit the crime. It is scarcely fair to the community or the Police that, when offenders are brought to book through the efforts of the Criminal Investigation Department, they should be let off with comparatively lenient sentences.

Hongkong has a great advantage over Shanghai in the matter of the treatment meted out to armed robbers, as the judicial authorities of that British Colony do not hesitate to inflict the "cat" on those who show such disdain for human life and property. There can be little doubt that the average dangerous criminal, whether in the Occident or the Orient, would rather undergo a lengthy term of imprisonment than contemplate the infliction of the "cat." The later form of punishment holds out a real terror to those who do not hesitate to bring pain and death to their defenceless victims. But for some unexplained reason the "cat" is frowned upon by the powers-that-be in Shanghai, and the task of the Police, therefore, is rendered correspondingly more difficult. But since we cannot have the "cat," the least we can expect is that trafficking in firearms be regarded by judicial officers of all nationalities much more seriously than it is now and it should surely be possible to secure uniformity of action in this respect. Otherwise crimes of violence are apt to assume an upward rather than a downward trend.

The Italian Elections

THE results of the general election in Italy seem to be nothing short of surprising. It was a foregone conclusion that Signor Mussolini would be returned to power, for his ministry has done much to rehabilitate Italian fortunes and to maintain a course of good government which we would like to see copied in other European countries. But we doubt if many would have forecast so complete and sweeping a victory. In the new Italian Chamber of Deputies, Signor Mussolini has been given complete control by the electorate. With a majority of 215 members in a total chamber of 535 the leader of the Fascisti may rightly believe that his policies have received the unqualified support of the people who originally placed him in power.

It cannot be argued that the extensive subdivision of the opposition has led to the present result; for the most part they were small and unorganized, and while they undoubtedly split the opposition it is extremely doubtful that had they in fact been united, Signor Mussolini would not have prevailed almost as completely as he has in this instance. Even if this subdivision had not contributed largely to the loss of some 127 opposition seats, the Fascisti would still have occupied the position they previously held, while it is conceivable that the very definite government, which the premier was able to provide did much to commend itself to the minds of the electors. As a general rule dictatorialships are unpopular. Under them the very people who assisted in their establishment are apt to become restive and impatient of control. But in some countries in Europe it seems to be the only form of government likely to succeed in these days of transition. Italy had an opportunity of testing it out. Fortunately the man who assumed control was not only a big personality, but a commanding statesman and the success of his administration is to be estimated by the fact that the Italians want more of it.

EXCERPTS FROM GREAT WRITERS

By Mathy

THE EXPECTATION OF LOVE:

Burns-Jones' "Dawn," a lovely figure, moves through the slumbering town with clashing cymbals, her eyes still veiled with sleep, her form still relaxed; borne forward, not by her will, but by the wind of the morning breathing life across the world. At every gate in the city, on every highway, in every square, Love waits—silent, watchful, expectant. She may have travelled far, but she has never been borne forward by any force which swept her along as the drowsy Dawn is swept; she has been drawn on by hope and anticipations which rise out of the depths of her own heart.

She may have had great happiness, incredible good fortune, by the way; but her face is set towards the future, and the past is dear to her, not for what it gave, but for what is promised. She has heard many words that set her heart beating, but she is still waiting for the great word that shall convey the ultimate secret of her nature, that shall put her in complete possession of that which is already hers. Many things content, but nothing satisfies her; she counts her wealth, not with a brooding but with an uplifted face.

She hoards nothing; everything she has is at risk in the great adventure, and the winds of heaven everywhere bear forward or beat back her argosies. She builds no secure places where she may hide her gains; she puts them into the venture upon which she has staked all her fortune. She may suffer cruelly; her heart may be torn and her hands pierced; but her wealth cannot be taken from her, for it is stored in the secret places of her soul.

However much Life may offer Love, no gift fully compasses her desires, for none is great enough to occupy her soul. When her hands are full, her heart cries out for more and better things; and no sooner have her eyes rested on the treasures which the hands of tomorrow are silently and mysteriously bringing her. With Love there was a beginning, although it seems to her that behind that memorable day there was a shadowy procession of days always moving toward her from the remotest past; but there is no ending.

From the summit of today the shining hills of tomorrow are always visible, and though she rests here for the night, her thoughts are always there. She works and strives and suffers and wears the flower of joy in this present hour; but, however intent she may be on service or sacrifice or happiness, there is always a look in her eyes as of something still dreamed of even in the busiest or the darkest hour. So Love travels through life with busy hands and a full heart, but with an eager glance forward; content whatever comes her way, and self-forgetful whatever fortune befalls her, but never satisfied.

This eager expectation, often disappointed but never surrendered, has its roots in the immortality of Love and is the manifestation of her magical power of growth; she witnesses to another and a diviner order of being. She never sees what she possesses apart from what it must grow to; she is not blind to its limitations, but she is always aware of what it may become; and to her prophetic heart what it may be it already is. With Love there is no present; so eager is she for the best in those to whom she gives herself that she always forestalls them and stands beside them with radiant eyes far down the path on which they are moving with slow and halting steps. Those who hear her words and know her devotion sometimes find them exaggerated and even inexplicable, and go about saying that she is blind.

She sees all that they see, but she sees also what does not lie within their vision, the man that is to be. Love gives herself, not to that which is achieved, but to that which is possible. When others surrender hope, she lights it with fresh sacrifice; when all seems lost, she sits clad with loneliness as with a garment, but with expectation still lighting the darkness of the hour. Because she gives herself to the highest and demands the highest, she believes in the highest. Here is the secret of her healing and lifting power: the silent, steadfast, invincible appeal of her faith.

How often has it happened that, when all other appeals went for naught, her appeal reached, roused, and redeemed, for to the weak and untrue that look in her eyes is like the light of God; searching, smiling, revealing, purifying.

By Dr. Henry Van Dyke

On Meditations—Ten Commandments

I
"I will meditate in the precepts and have respect unto thy ways."
—Ps. 119:11.

Our dreams of the future are too much like the modern stage, full of elaborate scenery and machinery, crowded with startling effects and brilliant costumes and magical transformations, but strangely vacant of all real characters.

The stuff of which our day dreams are made is for the most part of very cheap material.

We seldom weave into them the threads of our inmost spiritual life.

We fancy ourselves going through the various experiences of life, a fortunate marriage, a successful business career, a literary triumph, a political victory.

But we do not stay to ask what manner of men and women we shall be when we are living here or there, or doing this or so.

Yet it is a much more important question than the thousand and one trifling interrogatories about the future with which we too customarily amuse our idle hours.

We are on a path which leads upward, by sure and steady steps, when we begin to look at our future selves with eyes of noble and clear purpose, and see our figures climbing with patient, dauntless effort toward the heights of true manhood and womanhood.

Visions like these are Joseph's dreams.

The very memory of them, if we cherish it, is a power of pure restraint and generous inspiration.

II.
"The ten commandments."—Ex. 34:28.

Whereunto shall we liken the ten commandments, and to what shall we compare the laws revealed upon Mount Sinai?

There are fruits borne by the tree of Wisdom, wherein the seed of harvest to come is hidden.

They are jewels in the crust of earth, wherein the teachings of life are made clear as crystal.

Wherefore it is said that God wrote them upon the rocks, because they belong to the foundation.

And He gave them to Israel, because they were His people chosen to enlighten all nations.

Yet He hath broken and scattered Israel, and the tables of stone laid up in the ark have vanished.

But the fruitfulness of their wisdom is not lost, neither have the jewels of their righteousness been darkened.

For in them we see clearly what is good for man to do, and what things hinder him in the upward way of living.

Wherefore Christ hath put His seal upon the ten commandments, because their meaning is love to God and our neighbor.

Near by are the tombs of his only son and grandson, and a little to the West is a monument marking the place where a devoted disciple mourned his Master for six years. All the other disciples mourned for three years. Just beyond the wall of the southern enclosure is another large plot of ground preserved for the remains of all the family descendants.

Near the main entrance to the "Wood" is the stump of a tree said to have been planted by a disciple and near it a stone inscription with an engraved image of the tree and not far away another inscription in which is included the walking stick used by the "Master".

The Landmark Of Our Fathers

By Rosa Faulkney Yancey

Remove not the ancient landmark which thy fathers have set.
—Proverbs xxi, 28.

General Robert E. Lee, the most beloved man ever born in Virginia, seems to be pursued even in death by a peculiar and perverse fate. He was a lover of peace, yet his occupation was war; he loved his home as few men love their homes, and yet it was taken away from him and turned into a resting place for the bones of his enemies—his home, the place where his children were born and where he had enjoyed all the happiness he was ever to know, was turned into a tomb.

True, it has grown to be a beautiful and hallowed spot, where the mighty dead sleep, but that came after his time and could not well be foreseen in 1870; then and for more than twenty years after it was only a sad and gray old mansion, neglected and bare and empty, with dead men buried in the front yard. There was a little summer house on which grew a cast-off rose—patches of gray stucco had fallen off the walls of the house; it was a mournful and deserted place then.

In those last years which were left to Lee he comforted himself at Washington College, the little college which had grown to dignity and importance because he became its head and with a meagre sum of money he built the little chapel which has now become the centre of a controversy throughout the South.

He is not even allowed the peace of death, for it is now proposed, for the sake of expediency, to practically destroy the chapel where his body has rested since his death in 1870 by erecting a handsome auditorium, in one wing of which his chapel is to be tucked out of sight as if we were ashamed of it.

The beauty of this chapel is in the eye of the beholder. There were no architects in Virginia after the war, and the State was in dire poverty. With limited means and country carpenters General Lee did the best he could, and those who knew him and loved him never found fault with his work; on the contrary, it became the most sacred spot in their country to them.

To go into that quiet little chapel, to look down on that sleeping marble figure is a rare and quickening experience to those who love the memory of Lee; it is a privilege they do not wish to have taken away from them.

You might build a marble temple there on Washington and Lee campus, and make it as perfect as the Parthenon; some modern Philhellas might even decorate it with a frieze as glorious as the original; another swaying procession in marble, on foot and on horseback, forever marching on to be crowned with the laurel wreath of victory, but we could not see it for tears that would rise at the memory of something far more precious that had been destroyed to make room for this—the humble work of a worn old man who once rode on a gray horse at the head of quite a different kind of procession, a gray and ragged and barefooted army of starving men, marching on to defeat and death and surrender for the cause of State's Rights.

Love is a thing quite apart from the expedient and the practical; it is in the same class with flowers, and singing birds, and trees—entirely useless things apparently, unless turned to a practical purpose. And yet, who will want to live in a world where these are turned to practical purpose, where flowers are only raised to be sold, where all the birds have been eaten, and all the trees cut down, and where no love is, even if the buildings are very beautiful and reach as high as the Tower of Babel?

We are wrong when we take the arts of civilization for civilization itself, for these are only the material and secondary evidences of civilization; the soul of a people will always be of more vital importance than their buildings, for buildings after all are but one way, and not even the greatest way, a people may take of expressing themselves.

Did Egypt and Greece and Rome enrich us as much as Judea? Beauty is a cold thing unless a divine spirit has breathed upon it, and the greatest treasures we have are the intangible treasures.

The Powers Of The Telescope

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS

"An Astronomer" at Kirkwood, Mo., asks: "How can one tell the power of a telescope? What must be the power to see the different planets? When will the next occultation of Venus occur?"

The "power" of a telescope usually means the degree of magnification of the object looked at that the instrument produces. This power depends upon the ratio between the focal length of the object-glass and the focal length of the eye-piece. The eyepiece sometimes consists of a single small lens, but more frequently of two small lenses mounted together at a short distance apart, and in this case the focal length of the two lenses acting together must be ascertained, for comparison with the focal length of the object-glass of the telescope.

When you know the focal length of the object-glass and also that of the eye-piece, divide the former by the latter, and the quotient will be the magnifying power, reckoned in diameters.

Suppose, for instance, that the focal length of the object-glass—i. e., the distance from the center of the object-glass to the place where it brings the rays of light together and makes a distinct image of the object toward which it is directed—is 60 inches, while the focal length of the eye-piece is one-half inch; then the magnifying power will be 120 diameters.

If you are unable to make satisfactory measures of the focal lengths of the lenses, you can ascertain the magnifying power by pointing the telescope at a brick wall, or a board-sided house at a considerable distance away; then look through the telescope with one eye, while with the other eye you look directly at the wall, or the house, outside the telescope. Count how many rows of brick or boards, seen with the naked eye, correspond in width with one row seen in the telescope, and that will be the magnifying power.

You can get very impressive views of the mountains and plains on the moon with magnifying power of from 50 to 100 diameters. The same powers will serve for Venus, although, of course, you will not be able to see any details on the disk of Venus; very few are to be seen with the most powerful telescopes. Powers of 100 to 200 will show you the belts and spots on Jupiter, as well as the four principal satellites of that planet, and their round black shadows crossing Jupiter's bright-colored disk when they pass between it and the sun. Saturn's ring system can be seen with a power of 50, but to view it well, especially the separation of the rings and the faint markings of the planet, use from 100 to 200.

When Mars is near next August, you can see his principal features well with the same powers used for Jupiter or Saturn. You will have no difficulty in seeing the south "polar snow" of Mars, like a gleaming white dot, or but-ton, but it will require more attention to observe well the slightly rusty and dusky markings on the planet's surface. Of course, the so-called "canals" are beyond the reach of an amateur's telescope, unless he has a large glass, and the eyes of a Schiaparelli, or a Lowell.

It is a good rule in practice not to press the magnifying power beyond fifty diameters to the inch of aperture, i. e., the breadth of the object glass. Thus, if the aperture is four inches, the highest power you can effectively use generally does not exceed 200. Under the very finest conditions of the atmosphere, and with an object-glass of exceptional excellence, a skilled observer may occasionally employ a power of from 75 to 100 per inch of aperture.

The next transit of Venus across the sun's face will occur on June 8, in the year 2004. As human life is said to be lengthening, many persons born this year may see that transit when they are eighty years old.

The Home Of Confucius

BY B. J. SOLE

To go to Chufou is to go right into the country where the "Master" lived and taught. Close by was his home and there is his grave and the magnificent temple erected to his memory. Chufou has been the goal of thousands of pilgrims through the twenty centuries since his death. The avenue of magnificent old cypress trees, about a mile long, leading from the North gate of the city to the cemetery is the same avenue that the feet of Emperors and pilgrims in every station of life have trod to do homage to the Great Sage who has been honoured with little less than divine rites by the Chinese.

The burial place and temple are still tended and carefully preserved by men who proudly bear the name of "Kung" and claim descent from the Master. There may still be seen the stump of a "hual" tree planted by the Teacher himself. It is carefully preserved in a marble parapet and is looked at through glass, and from it is growing another tree which shows that the ancient root still has the sap of life. In the temple is an engraving of Confucius, incised in stone, rubbings of which may be bought in the city, and in the same hall is a set of very fine stone engravings (a hundred and five pictures) depicting his life. This is now covered with glass to prevent further disfigurement by the hand of loving followers. A book of rubbings from these most interesting pictures may also be bought for a few tiao.

Chufou is situated in Shantung on the main Tientsin-Pukow Railway and the Blue Express stops to set down visitors. The Duke of Kung, at the time the railway was built used his influence to prevent it being brought to the city, and the visitor must therefore ride about five miles from the station either in a Chinese mule-drawn cart or by wheelbarrow or on donkey back. There is a hotel at the station which provides accommodation for foreign visitors (though it may be as well to
